6 reasons why children benefit from learning languages.

Learning a language at any age is rewarding, however, children are at a particular advantage as they find it easier to learn new things and benefit most from the opportunities that being bilingual can bring.

- 1. Better academic performance. Many reports have proven that children who study languages achieve better test results than their monolingual peers.
- 2. Greater confidence. The knowledge that they can express themselves in another language encourages children to learn more in other subjects.
- 3. Learning is easy. Children are enthusiastic about learning and are not afraid of making mistakes. They readily copy native speakers and do not fear looking stupid, therefore they develop more native-like accents.
- 4. Improved career prospects. As the world becomes increasingly globalised, the ability to speak another language is becoming highly valued by employers.
- 5. Ability to make friends with people abroad. Children will get much more out of travelling abroad and will develop stronger cultural connections.
- 6. Greater understanding of their own language along with a wider and richer range of vocabulary. The more children learn about a foreign language, the more they will understand how their first language works.
